

ANGOLA

Currency : For the earlier part of the colonial period, Angola used Portuguese currency. However, the late 1920s proved a difficult time for the Portuguese currency. In 1928 the Angolar was introduced, nominally exchanging 1.25 Escudos for 1 Angolar. Fluctuations in exchange rates and isolation during WWII meant the Angolar was effectively traded at par. This equality was recognised in 1952 when "centavo of Escudo" coins were introduced and in 1958 the currency again officially became known at the Escudo.

After independence, the Kwanza replaced the Escudo at par. However, inflation became a problem, and the Novo Kwanza was introduced, officially at par with the old Kwanza, but only 5% of currency could be exchanged for cash. In 1995 the Novo Kwanza was replaced by the Kwanza Reajustado at 1000:1 which in turn was replaced in 1999 by a simple Kwanza at 1 Million : 1.
