

MOROCCO

Former French and Spanish Morocco achieved independence in stages between 1956 and 1958, with the two areas joining to become the Kingdom of Morocco in 1958. The international city of Tangier was also reintegrated in Morocco in 1956. However, Ceuta and Mellila (enclaves on the coast facing Spain) remained Spanish.

The small territory of Ifni (formerly Spanish) was taken over by Morocco in 1969. Former Spanish Sahara to the south was subject to a mass incursion by Morocco in 1975 ("The Green March") to wrest power from the Spanish colonial rulers. Mauritania temporarily also tried to annex the southern parts of Spanish Sahara. Both occupiers met resistance by the local Polisario independence forces. United Nations failed to find a compromise solution. Currently Morocco occupies the towns and strategic sites, while more isolated areas are dominated by Polisario.

Revenue stamp issues of the Kingdom during the transition period 1957-1959 were denominated in Moroccan Francs, but for ease of stamp identification, these stamps are included with the other Franc issues of French Morocco. Issues in Dirham currency from 1960 are listed in this section of independent Morocco.
